RESOLUTION.—In replying to the Notes of the Finance Committee, some of the Governments have expressed views which, on certain important points, have been found to be inconsistent with the principles regulating the relations of the Imperial and Provincial Governments in respect of the Provincial Contracts. It is desirable therefore, on the eve of a new term of contract, to recapitulate shortly the principles upon which the Government of India has acted in deciding the various questions raised in these papers.

2. The Government of India, while handing over various departments of the administration to the immediate financial control of Local Governments, has uniformly reserved, in its own charge, several departments involving very large expenditure. It is responsible for the whole of the Military Defence of the Empire, including Marine charges and Military Works. It is responsible, except to a limited extent, for meeting the interest upon debt, including the large payments to Guaranteed and other Railway Companies. It is responsible for all Home charges, including the increasing burden of exchange. These and similar burdens not only have to be met out of the receipts of the main Revenue Departments, of which the administration is confided to the various Provincial Governments, but must, in many instances, be considered to have priority of claim over the ordinary charges of Civil Administration. Existing obligations in respect of payment of interest and guaranteed interest must be met before money is considered to be available for any other purpose; and Military Expenditure is in many respects in the same category.

3. The Government of India, therefore, while it continues to be responsible for these charges, cannot give up its prior claims upon the revenues from which they are to be met, and in framing the Provincial Contracts, the Government of India sets apart, for a specified period, only so much of its revenues as it can reasonably expect to spare, to meet the civil expenditure placed under Provincial control. When such a period comes to an end, as the last period will on March 31st 1887, the question first to be considered is, not how much of the revenues, assigned under the last contract, can continue to be usefully spent upon the heads of expenditure controlled by the Provincial Governments, but how much of the general revenues the Government of India, consistently with its obligations, and with the growth of demands upon its resources since the commencement of the period about to expire, can surrender for a further period to the Provincial Governments, in order to enable them to meet whatever expenditure is essential to the conduct of administration.

4. At a time when it is necessary to use every endeavour to reduce expenditure within the limits of the available revenues, Provincial Governments are well aware of the necessity of their taking a due share in the general effort. The Government of India has carefully considered, in connection with the new contracts, the principles which should be adopted, and has consulted with the Local Governments as to the precise arrangements by which effect should be given to those principles in order to impose upon Provincial resources an equitable but not an excessive share of the general burden.

5. On the occasion of the present revision of the Provincial contracts, a Local Government may find itself compelled to surrender a larger share than on the former revision, of the increase which its revenue has received during the period of the contract. It has been the aim of the Government of India to disturb as little as may be arrangements which, during the term of the current contract, have been established, and for which the continued allotment of funds is necessary. But it cannot on that account recognize the claim of Provincial Governments at the close of the contract over revenues which either are, or by reasonable economies, can be made to be, in excess of the expenditure. The fact that the Government of India is and must remain responsible for the financial credit and prosperity of the country may therefore compel it, on a consideration of the whole circumstances in which it is placed, to leave to a Provincial Government at the commencement of a new contract a smaller amount of the increase which has accrued to its revenues during the expiring term, than might otherwise have been assigned to it; and as it is obliged to consider not merely the circumstances of each province taken by itself but the relative claims of all upon the common fund, it cannot undertake to make the demands of each Government the sole standard by which to determine the financial position in which the new contract should place it. Provincial Governments are, however, on the present occasion assured the amount needful to cover all assigned expenditure; and this, it will be remembered, in the earlier phases of the Provincial contract scheme, was not the case. In this direction, therefore, a substantial concession has been made to Provincial Governments, which it is hoped that they will bear in mind. By the exercise of economy and by retrenchment no less than by the normal growth of their revenues, Provincial Governments may in all cases provide themselves during the currency of the ensuing contract with a margin of revenue to be employed in carrying out further projects. The motives for the exercise of that good and economical administration which is one of the chief objects of the contract system will therefore not be impaired by reductions in the existing scale of expenditure. There is nothing in any degree inconsistent with the system of the Provincial contracts in the assertion, at a revision of contracts, of the claims of the Supreme Government, on the ground of its own necessities, over such share of the increased revenues as there are sufficient and good reasons for considering not to be needed for the current administration.

6. The method applied to the calculation of the Provincial assignments may be set forth in the following terms:—

- (a) The revenues, under ordinary circumstances, increase year by year; part of this increase being spontaneous growth, and part being due to good administration.
- (b) The demands upon Government for expenditure also increase year by year.
- (c) Accordingly, a certain part of the revenues and a certain part of the expenditure are separated off for a time from the general account. An estimate is made of the amount at which these revenues and expenditure stand at their existing stage of growth, (it will be noted that the existing stage of growth forms the basis of the estimate) and the two amounts are so arranged as to balance each other, or to present a moderate excess on the one side or on the other. The condition of the separation is, that all demands for increase over the initial figure of the expenditure side must be met by realization of increases over the initial figure on the revenue side.

It is impossible, in view of such arrangements, to calculate the revenues of the assigned departments at the lowest figure that the Local Governments can, under the most adverse circumstances, receive. The Government of India is also unable to effect an assignment of revenue sufficient, without further development, to assure increases of expenditure contemplated by Provincial Governments, or to grant an initial surplus of assigned revenue over assigned expenditure.

7. The object, therefore, which the Government of India has set before itself has been to make the nearest possible estimate of the standard of revenue and expenditure existing in 1886-87, after testing and comparing it with the figures of previous years, and to make that standard the basis of the assignment. It is true that the standard of 1886-87 is not in every respect an absolutely assured one; there may be some respects in which a future falling off in revenue is expected. So far as these can be foreseen, the Government of India has made allowance for them in making its estimate of the present assignment. On the other hand, of what may be called the general fluctuation of revenue, Provincial Governments must bear their share. The Government of India has, in the event of such a fluctuation, to bear the loss in respect of that share of the revenues which is reserved for the general Imperial expenditure, and it cannot undertake, in addition to its own share of the loss, to make good the share which falls upon the Provincial account. There seems no reason to apprehend any sudden cessation of the general improvement of revenues, and Provincial Governments should take such measures with reference to increase of expenditure that the situation will not be without remedy if, in some respects, the increase of revenue does not come up to their anticipations.

8. But in addition to the ordinary estimating of the existing standard of Revenue and Expenditure, financial necessities have imposed upon the Government of India, on the present occasion of the revision of the contracts, the duty of examining whether the existing scale of expenditure cannot, in some respects, be reduced. Under present circumstances it would be the duty of the Government of India, if it had still the direct responsibility for the civil expenditure of Provincial Governments, to effect such reductions in that expenditure as it found reasonable or expedient; and the Government of India, after full and careful consideration of the recommendations of the Finance Committee and of the replies submitted by the Local Governments, has felt itself compelled to exercise its discretion in judging what economies in the administration may be reasonably and at once effected. In fixing Provincial assignments, it has framed its estimates according to the conclusions thus arrived at.

9. These general remarks upon the method adopted by the Government of India in the consideration of the questions now before it, will explain the Resolutions which are separately recorded on the several points raised by the Provincial Governments. There remain, however, some other questions arising out of the replies of the Provincial Governments on which it may be convenient to record here the views and orders of the Government of India.

10. In some cases increases of assignment have been claimed by Provincial Governments on the ground that they intend in future to undertake certain new expenditure. The Finance Committee have rightly left these proposals out of their calculations. Both revenues and expenditure must be calculated upon the standard of the current year 1886-87, and Local Governments must, for any increases of expenditure in the next and succeeding years' accounts, look to such increased revenue as they can secure under the various heads of revenue.

11. Again, the Finance Committee divided their proposals for economy into two classes. Some economies they considered immediately practicable, and they have taken account of these in their estimates for the contract; others they considered to be either not immediately available or not within the power of the Local Government of its own motion to carry out, and did not reckon in their estimates for the contract. For the purpose of settling the Provincial Contracts, it is not necessary to pass orders regarding any but the first class; but it should not be considered that because an assignment is made which covers expenditure regarding which the Committee have raised the second kind of objection, the economy proposed by the Committee is declared unnecessary or inadvisable. It will be for the Provincial Governments to examine their expenditure in the light of the Finance Committee's remarks. The Provincial Governments are requested to take up each of the Finance Committee's recommendations in this class in turn and to report how far they are prepared to accept them, or on what grounds they disapprove them.

12. The question has been asked whether the benefit of these further economies will accrue to the Provincial Government or to the Imperial Government. It is the desire of the Government of India that in all ordinary cases, or cases which involve the careful readjustment, by the Provincial Government, of the machinery of administration, the Provincial Government should get this benefit; but in those special cases which involve questions of a more general character, or arrangements which are not immediately under Provincial control, such for example, as the possibilities of economy in the High Courts, the Government of India reserves to itself the decision whether the benefit of possible economies shall accrue to the Provincial Government concerned, or to the general exchequer; or in part to both.

13. It has on various occasions, during the currency of the existing contract, been admitted by the Government of India that when considerable expenditure is undertaken by Local Governments to meet its wishes and to carry into execution projects which are pressed upon it by that Government, the claim of Provincial Governments to a contribution, or to an assignment of revenue, to provide according to the circumstances of the case, in part or in whole for the charges consequent on the execution of such projects, will be recognised. That understanding the Government of India will observe; but on the other hand the obligations of Provincial Governments, in the event of severe famine, or abnormal disaster, as provided in paragraphs 6, 7, and 8 of Resolution No. 3353, dated 30th September 1881, will continue to be enforced.

14. Disappointment has, in one instance, been expressed at the result of five years' experience of the provincial system, because it is said to have been found, with regard to restrictions on the action of the Local Government, that little freedom has been gained by the so-called decentralization. No measures of any importance, it has been represented, can be initiated without prior reference to the Government of India. It seems, therefore, desirable to explain that there are necessary limits to decentralization, which are imposed upon the Government of India by the nature of its own relation to the supreme controlling authority, the Secretary of State. The Government of India cannot concede to Local Governments greater powers than it itself possesses; it cannot itself initiate measures of importance without reference to Her Majesty's Government in England, and absolute administrative independence is by no means the object of the Provincial system. The considerations set forth in this Resolution will show how impossible it is for the Government of India to give up altogether its duty of general financial control, so long as the finances of the Supreme and of the several Local Governments have to be administered as parts of a single system.

15. Objection has also been made that Local Governments cannot, without the sanction of the Government of India, sanction the expenditure in any given year of balances to their credit, unless provision has been made in the Budget of that year for such expenditure. It is necessary therefore to observe that, quite independently of any provincial arrangements, there exists the obligation upon the Government of India and upon every Local Government of managing its finances upon the system adopted by Parliament in respect of English Finance, and prescribed for India by the Secretary of State, in respect of Indian finance; a system which is the basis of all finance in India whatever, whether Imperial or Provincial. The following are the orders of the Secretary of State published under date 7th April 1860 :—

"Before the commencement of each official year the Supreme Government will require careful estimates to be framed of the anticipated income and the proposed expenditure of the Empire for the coming year. And after considering the various objects to be accomplished in relation to the means and resources for such accomplishment; after comparing the past with the proposed expenditure; after weighing the recommendations of the several Executive Governments and the Heads of Departments, the Supreme Government will allot and appropriate to each branch of the service, and to the several detailed heads within each branch, specific sums. The several Executive Governments and the Departments will be charged with the due application of the sums assigned by the above act of appropriation. The specific amount assigned will on no account be exceeded."

16. It will be seen from this extract that the Government of India, in laying down the rules prescribed in its Resolution No. 1709, dated 22nd March 1877, and insisting that Provincial Governments should regard proposals for expenditure in the light of their Budget Estimates and without reference to balances which may be at their credit, but for the employment of which during the current year no provision has been made in Provincial Estimates, is not restricting any liberty conceded under the Provincial system, but is merely enforcing a system of financial management to which it is itself expected to conform. The Provincial Governments enjoy, it must be observed, the great advantage of being relieved from all consideration of questions of ways and means. The Government of India undertakes to provide the actual cash required from time to time to meet their drawings for expenditure. But the Government of India has to consider and make its arrangements, at the beginning of each year, with reference to the estimates which it accepts on the proposals of the various local Governments, and it would be impossible to work under a system which allowed Local Governments, at their free will, to set aside their own deliberate scheme of expenditure and to call upon the Central Government, without any notice, to furnish the money required for new and unprovided outlay.

17. His Excellency in Council, in recording the above remarks, is very far removed from the desire to impute to Provincial Governments any backwardness in tendering their assistance on the occasion of the current revision of the Provincial contracts. His Excellency in Council, on the contrary, is extremely desirous to acknowledge the frank and loyal spirit in which those Provincial Governments who in 1886-87 were called upon for contributions-in-aid, and to whom now there has been proposed a considerable reduction in the amount of revenue at their disposal, have responded to the calls made upon them. That the arrangements now concluded have been the cause of so little contention is mainly due, His Excellency in Council gladly acknowledges, to the conciliatory spirit in which the proposals of the Finance Committee having for their object those reductions of revenue have been met by the Provincial Governments immediately concerned. It has been apparent, however, in the course of the proceedings, that misapprehensions have existed in regard to important points connected with the system of Provincial Contracts, and it is desirable that the Local Governments should be reassured upon such points, and that the harmonious working of the contracts during the ensuing five years should thus, as far as possible, be assured. In this view the present Resolution is communicated to Local Governments.

ORDERED that this Resolution be communicated to the several Local Governments and Administrations; to the Comptroller and Auditor General; to the several Accountants General and Comptrollers; and to the Home, Revenue and Agricultural, and Public Works Departments.

ORDERED also, that this Resolution be published in the Gazette of India.
